The Power OF BEING SMALL

The significant contribution of small rural producers drives Brazilian agribusiness.

Agribusiness is responsible for 21.1% of Brazil's GDP (Gross Domestic Product), meaning that more than a fifth of everything generated in Brazil comes from agriculture. And, of that total, about 25% comes from family farming, that is, 5% of Brazil's GDP originates from the properties of small rural entrepreneurs.

These were some of the figures released by the National Secretary of Family Farming and Cooperativism, Fernando Schwanke, in an interview for Expoagro 2020 Magazine (on page 11). The report also includes other data that prove the contribution of agribusiness to the country's development, a sector that stands out both in the production of export goods and food for the national population.

Agribusiness generates 21.1% of Brazil's GDP.

5% of GDP comes from small rural entrepreneurs.
